make our hemisphere that of freedom." Here, again, the careful words "America, North and South," as well as the phrases "atla-ntic affairs" and "our hemisphere," denote the real extent to which the doctrine applies. Finally, the two main propositions on the subject in President Wilson's message of Dec. 2, 1913, cover the ground in official form. The first of these is that "the American continents, by the free and independent conditions which

At Budapest the resignation of Dr. WERKELE, the Premier, has raised the constitutional question whether the popular branch of the Hungarian Parliament has the right to impose its will on the upper House and the sovereign. It will be re-at right angles. The Union ram crashed into the Confederate vessel, cutting her nearly in two, and in a few seconds the wreck had disappeared below the water. The Monitor had selected one of the Confederate steamers as her opponent, when the Confederate rams, General Beauregard and General Price, made a dash at her from opposite sides. But the commanders of these vessels had not calculated on the great speed of the new Union vessels, and supposed that they were still dealing with slow-going craft. The result was that they

Then sore afraid I did relate
All he had done—all that I knew—
And nothing did exaggerate.
At which the pale ghost grander grew;
"Ye gods!" the spirit cried: "is that A Jeffersonian Democrat?"

Then pausing while I held my breath,
And the cuckoo creak in the White House said
'Twas morning, stantly as death,
And with that soft, mysterious tread,
As noiseless as departing gloom,
The solemn ghost strode from my room.

Newspapers and Newsboys.—To the Editor of The Sun.—Is there no way of stopping the nuisance of having those newsboys jostle your paper from one's hands every morning? They assemble at the foot of the elevated stairs and at the bridge entrance, and there are probably a dozen standing in line, and each one takes ahead of some one's newspaper. They do not ask for name, but they catch hold of it and try to sell it away. The police ought to stop this nuisance, as it is not very agreeable to have one's progress impeded by these boys, and have them take hold of one's paper. I am not an enemy of the newsboys, but I do not wish to harm them in any way, but they are very bad, and I wish this thing was stopped. S. R.

If Lion Pulls and Horse Falls.
from Chapter 13, "Jousting"

If a lion and a strong horse were to pull in opposite directions, the horse would pull the lion backward with comparative ease; but if the lion were hatched behind the horse and moving in the same direction, and were allowed to exert his strength in backing, he could easily pull the horse down upon his haunches or drag him across the field, so much greater is his strength when exerted backward from the hind legs than in forward pulling.
